

No other program has received more public support than the DO-NOT-CALL program. Unfortunately the Federal rules do not curtail this rude and irresponsible business practice. Thus, the Consumers in various States (remember "States Rights"?) have had to insist their Legislatures provide them the peace and privacy they have a right to expect in their own homes. We pay for our phone service and when we speak as loudly as we have, that we DO NOT WANT TELE-MARKETER'S interrupting our dinners and invading our homes, you should respect our wishes and support any State extension of those wishes, including those in place in New Jersey. Otherwise, you force us to exercise the one right you cannot interfere with, the right to NOT purchase any product ever again from any offending telemarketer. That was what I had to resort to, to make a case against this rude and invasive practice before the FCC and New Jersey finally gave me back my phone rights. Do not take any away again, including those additional protections provided to me by New Jersey.

Thanks,
